

The Future of Education Consortium

Based in Cambridge, UK

Why Now?

Technology evolves rapidly, and new regulations are shaping the educational landscape. Let's face the challenges together, foster inclusive, interactive learning and provide personalised support to students' needs.

Embrace the power of technology to revolutionise education and prepare learners for the future.

Your Benefits

Advance education by incorporating technologies.

Broaden your network in Cambridge and beyond.

Discuss how to utilise the potential of EdTech solutions.

Collaborate on the challenges technologies bring.

Build lasting partnerships in the UK and across Europe.

How it Works

Firstly, a briefing will be required to get to know you and your needs and to tailor the programme accordingly. Thematic meetings will include discussions on hot topics raised by members and will be informed by "expert witnesses", in areas including AI use in schools, inclusive teaching and learning and avoiding plagiarism in academic work. Workshops and creative sessions will ensure that the group's collective expertise is used, with expert facilitators moderating.

Why the CfBI?

The Centre for Business Innovation (CfBI) has an extensive track record of managing consortia for almost 20 years in diverse areas.

Based in Cambridge, the CfBI is well connected and works closely with the University of Cambridge and leading academic groups across Europe.

Participation Fees

The annual participation fee of £8,000+VAT is due on sign-up. This allows for 3 'unnamed' physical delegate seats. There is a discount of 50% for eligible organisations. CfBI's standard terms and conditions apply.

Who is this for?

A comprehensive approach to education is only possible when private and public sector collaborate. Companies and policymakers – we need all of you to advance education!
